

Karpaz Gate Marina

LUNCH

Lunch is my favourite and main meal during the day, which, if possible, I love to eat at Hemingway's Resto Bar at the marina. Although there is an international menu with many delicious choices, my favourites are always the traditional plates, especially fish. Usually, we share the same table with department managers, which is a good chance for us to come together and discuss the rest of the day.

AFTERNOON

The afternoon is mostly dedicated to meeting with boat owners, if we do not have a travel lift operation at the dry dock, plus the second tour of the pontoons and promenade area of the marina. We consider a boutique marina like Karpaz Gate Marina to be a kind of non sailing superyacht. We are on the sea, with crew and customers, working with similar technical equipment, following similar procedures and trying to give the best service to our guests with a big smile. All of these responsibilities need meticulous attention to detail and effort every day.

END OF THE WORKING DAY

In many jobs at a marina, your working day never finishes, but you still need to find a way to go to home! I leave the marina at around 7pm during the winter season and 8pm in the summer. Often, I will spend happy hour with my team and our guests at Hemingway's, which is a great way to wind down while watching the sunset.

DINNER

I have two options after a normal working day. I can go to my boat and spend a couple of hours completing various maintenance jobs or go home and prepare dinner, which I tend to do in the winter. I love cooking and it is easy to find many varieties of vegetables and meat here in North Cyprus, which are always fresh and tasty. Having barbeques with friends is almost a weekly routine. The day finishes at around 11pm, sometimes at home, sometimes in my cabin on board. Whenever I have the chance, I sleep on my boat while watching the millions of stars from the hatch.

Hemingway's